

Stela Rubínová

Ms. Stela Rubínová is a Trade Policy Analyst at the Trade and Agriculture Directorate at the OECD. Prior to that she was a Research Economist at the Economic Research and Statistics Division of the World Trade Organization (WTO). At WTO she contributed to several publications, including the annual World Trade Reports, and co-led the work on the WTO Trade Cost Index. She also co-authored an ILO-WTO publication on Investing in Skills for Inclusive Trade and co-coordinated the World Trade Report 2019 on the Future of Services Trade. Stela's research topics are at the junction of international economic integration, global value chains, and economic growth. She holds a Ph.D. in International Economics from the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, Geneva.